

Finally. The varied areas of floodplain management and liability—management, engineering, climate science, insurance, regulation, policy and law—distilled for you each month.

Announcing the Floodplain Management & Liability Reporter, covering the policy, law, engineering and science of floodplain management, and brought to you by Argent Communications Group, providers of legal and technical natural resources information for over 20 years.

In the “real world” of floodplain management and liability, floodplain managers, engineers, climate experts and lawyers must work together as a team for successful flood management and also to address the complex legal aspects of liability for flood damage.

To provide you, on a monthly basis, with the information you need for success, we are assembling a growing Editorial Board of working practitioners—not staff writers—including:

- Scott L. Shapiro, Esq. Partner, Downey Brand LLP and Editor-in-Chief, Floodplain Management and Liability Reporter;
- Andrea Clark, Esq., Water Resources and Rights Practice, Downey Brand LLP;
- Chris Elliott, Vice President and Project Director, ICF Jones & Stokes;
- Joe Mantey, Consulting Economist;
- David I. Maurstad, Vice President and National Business Manager, Emergency Management Division, PBS&J; and
- Eric E. Nagy, Director, Watershed Planning & Design Section, HDR Engineering, Inc.

Practitioners concerned with floodplain management need timely, relevant information and analysis—in one convenient source.

Each month, in an easy-to-read format, the 24-28 page Floodplain Management & Liability Reporter covers topics related to:

- Floodplain Management;
- Flood Hazard Mitigation;
- NFIP and State Insurance;
- Flood Prevention and Preparedness;
- Disaster Recovery;
- Climate Change and Weather Trends; and
- Water Storage, Water Supply and Land Use.
